

Surely there may be other proper ways to get into the food business 13 and if you are ever of such a mind, it would be wise to 26 think of some of them. But as you might guess, Jack, the newcomer 39 to our town, just agreed to buy and the deal was consummated on the 53 spot. There had been a meeting of the minds and a transfer of cash 66 to make it binding. Jack had bought a restaurant and was now taking 80 his wife to see the shop. 86

Jack and his bride entered the little restaurant. They sat down at 100 a table, and then Jack went into the kitchen to get her a cup of his 114 famous coffee. It would not be fair to tell you that the gentle wife 128 was at this moment overjoyed with the purchase, but the longer she 141 sat at the table the more the feeling of pride in ownership began to 155 fill her heart and mind. When Jack returned with the coffee and sat 169 down beside her, they started to talk about the place. He explained 183 how he would first of all clean and spruce up the whole restaurant - 196 kitchen and dining room. Yes, that was the first thing he would do. 210
Of course, the coffee would always be as good as he had just made 224 and brought her, and he would serve food just as good. Yes, she 237 realized that the coffee was good, and his enthusiasm was beginning 250 to take hold of her. Together, they would build a fine business serving the 265 best food in our town. 270

There was a lot to learn. They quickly discovered that they had 284 to be in the dining room, in the kitchen, and behind the cash register 299 all at the same time. But they were young and quick and not afraid 312 to work, as you can tell when visiting any of the five shops they own. 326
